

So, way, way back in the autumn and winter of 85, I was up in Fairbanks, Alaska for the Air Force trying to decide what to do when my first tour was up. Should I reenlist or get out.

So, I was sitting in my room and made a vow to the Big Guy that I would never marry if He used me for His Honor and Glory in a Great and Mighty Way.

This has, of course, been fulfilled by Theoferrum as well as my more recent Covenant with Heh which has promises of great things to say the least.

So, right as I was ending my Communion, I 'saw' a Sign of this Vow I had just made.

I was on the side of a country road and I saw a Diamond made out of Birch Trees and, right in the middle of that diamond was a smaller Hardwood Sapling that formed a perfect Cross.

Basically, I saw the Rune above.

But, the story doesn't end there for, years later, in the summer of 01, I'm on Jon and my (mother's) land back east, basically homeless living in a camper trailer on the hill on our property (which she had wanted to turn into an artist's colony) and I look out the window one day and, right there in front of me about 20 yards is that very Crazy Diamond as I called it back then formed out of four Birch trees with a hardwood sapling right in the middle forming that cross.

I actually drew a picture of it and gave it to my mother for mother's day that year.

Now, fast forward to yesterday and my Quest into the Nordic Runes which I didn't know shit about never having studied them. And I performed my initial investigation and started consolidating the information and simplifying the equation and finally took a break and got some sleep.

Then, this morning (which is about 1 PM if you're working the Graveyard Shift on the Via Sagularis) I get up and check the News then look through that post and decided it would be cool to look up Jon's Name in the Runes.

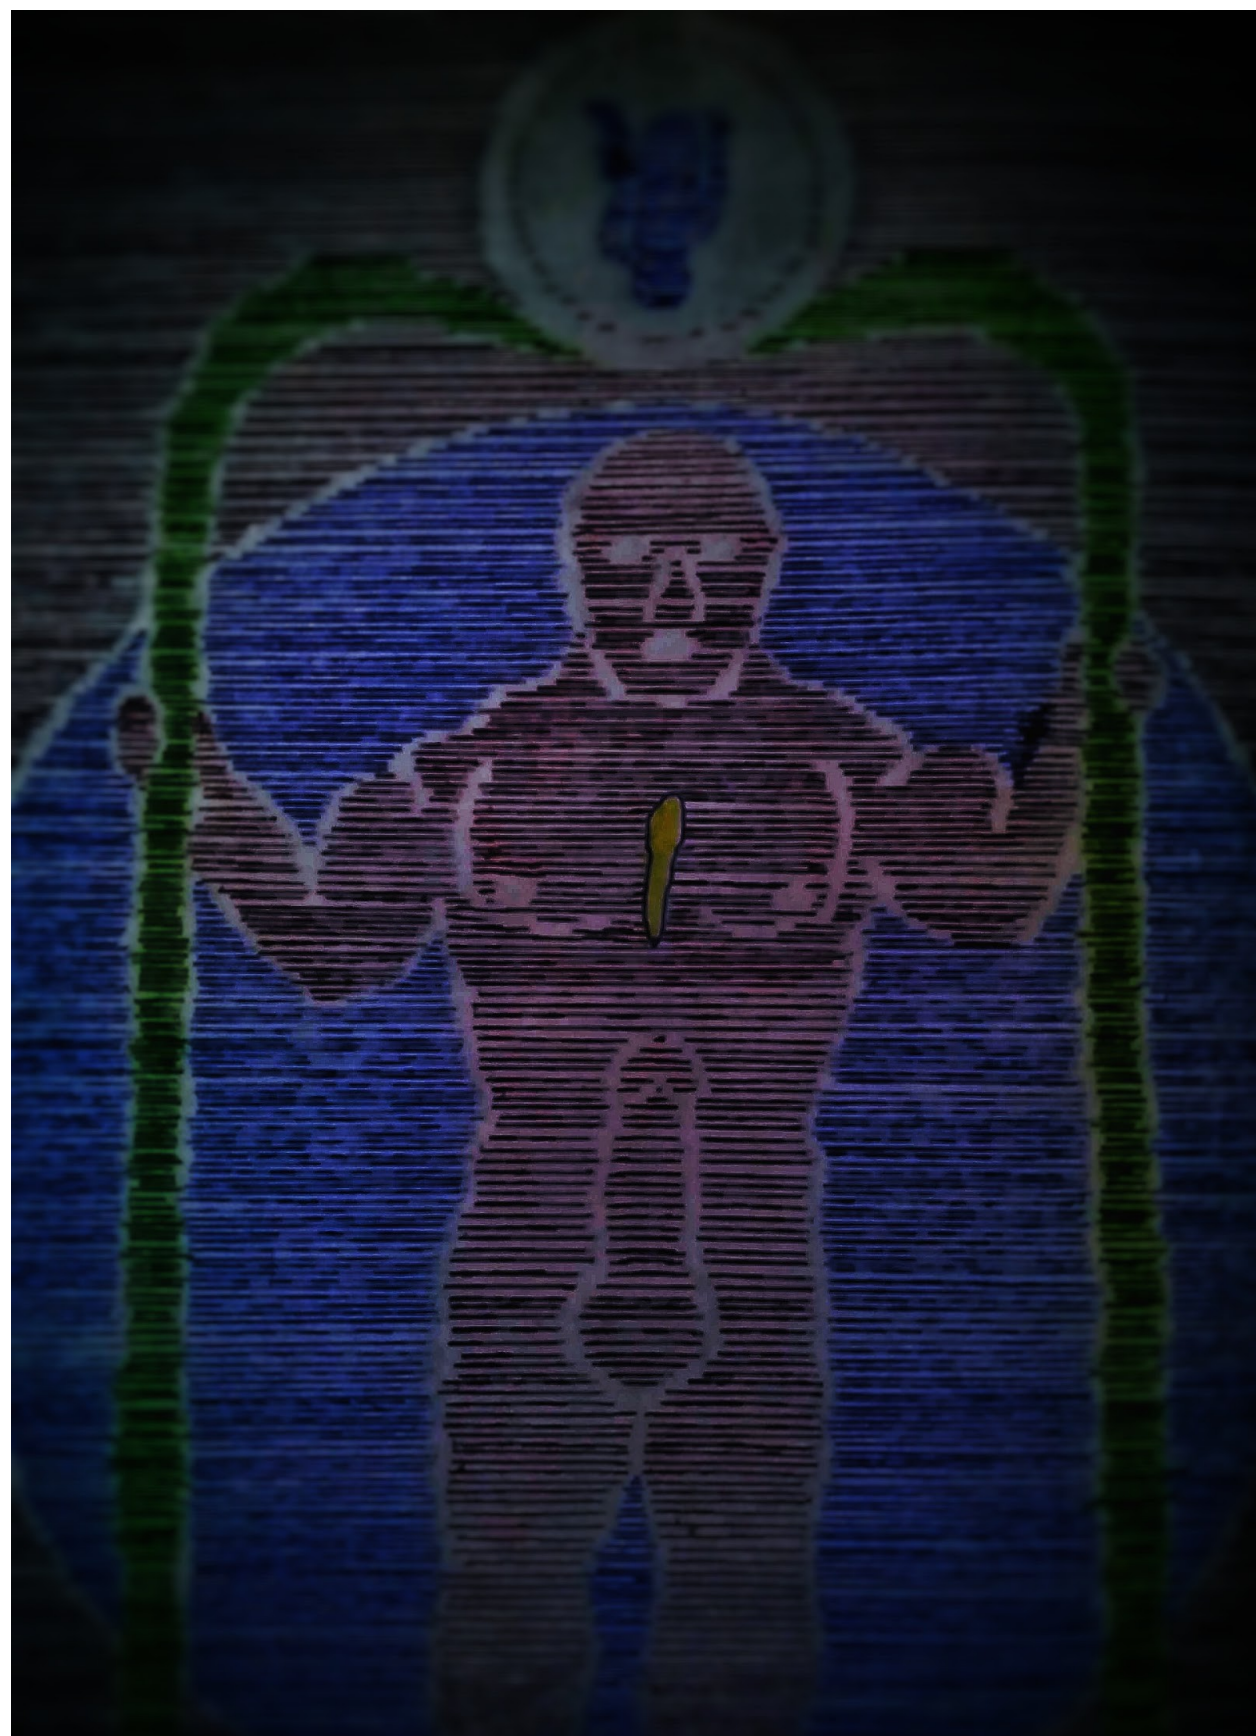

And, I'm looking at this and realize, gee that looks familiar and realize I'm looking at the Rune of the Sign He gave me of my Vow to Him.

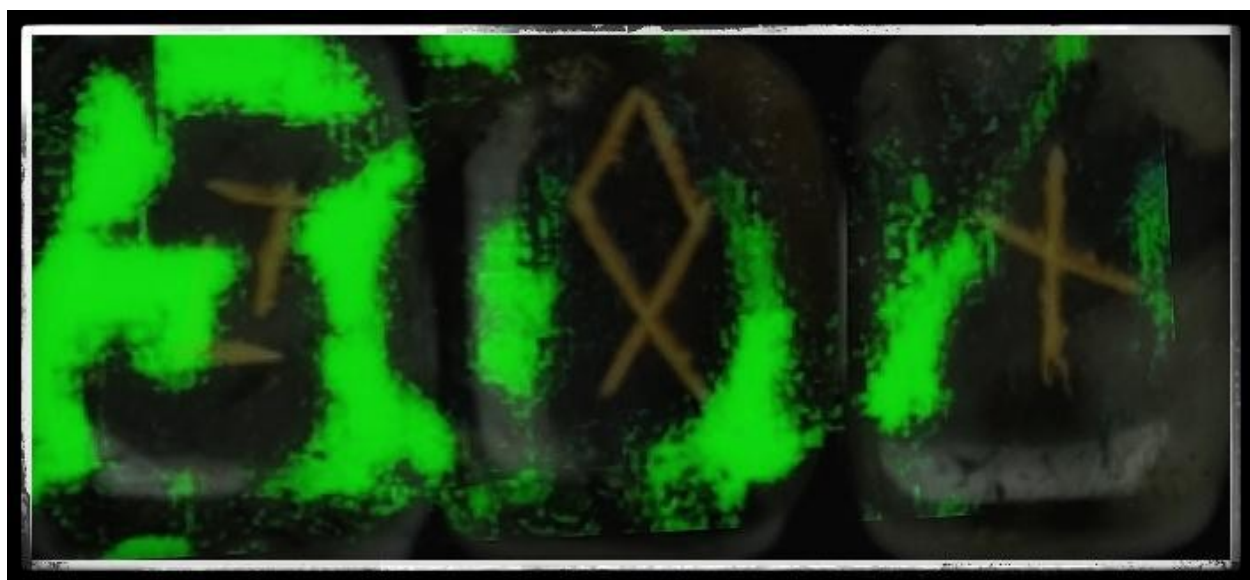

So, I realize I gotta put the Cross in the middle of that Diamond so I jump on Snapseed and line those two up and don't know what to do with the 'J' but then, knowing that Runes can be read right to left or left to right or down to up or up to down I decided that, if they really were magical (they are not but their Creator is), then you should be able to read them three dimensionally as well meaning forward to back and back to forward.

So, the J forms the large stone in the background which actually is the foreground and the O is in the midground and the N is in the foreground which is actually the background and, in the process of making them 3D it also merges them with Eternity cause you are looking at Heh on the other side of Infinity holding the two Spear Leafs in the Decreed Place.

So, I decided, hell, might as well look at my name Dav too and there it is. Here is what the composite image looks like.

You can clearly see the Chi Rho Symbol which means Christ which, of course, means Anointed and it doesn't take a rocket scientist to see who anointed me cause that's Heh's Phallic Symbol in the Belly of my Name, know what I mean?

Which occurred about the time that photo was taken, actually...